

The Future of the Intellectual Project

The Transformation of Contemporary Universities

17.45 on Friday 26th October, Woburn House, London

Seminar Overview

The New Institutional Imperatives seminar series has sought to explore the key avenues in which contemporary universities are developing their third mission activities. These are in regards economic, societal, political, and enterprising engagement. Our final seminar will raise two fundamental challenges associated with the third mission, namely the future autonomy of academic scholarship and the economic model to sustain and develop HEIs over the coming years. This seminar series has shown how the third mission seeks to harness the entrepreneurial and civic capacities of universities to develop innovative ways to bridge public and private divide and generate greater impact by playing a more strategic social and economic role locally and globally. This final seminar will explore these questions from a series of influential figures from academic, policy, and practitioner domains.

Rt Hon David Willetts MP

Minister of State for Universities and Science

Prof Geoffrey Crossick

Director of the AHRC's Cultural Value Project & Former Vice-Chancellor University of London

Prof Mary Walshok

Associate Vice Chancellor for Public Program UC San Diego

Prof Nick Petford

Vice Chancellor University of Northampton

Prof Sir Tim Wilson

Former vice-chancellor of the University of Hertfordshire & Author of University-Business Collaboration review

Registration

To register for the seminar go to:

www.niiseminars.co.uk

or please contact :

Tim Vorley

tim.vorley@sheffield.ac.uk

Fumi Kitagawa

fumi.kitagawa@mbs.ac.uk